Summer course I and II

During this summer, the first two EHRI Summer Schools in Holocaust Studies were held in Paris and in Munich. Both were concluded successfully. Feedback from the participants as well as the lecturers and programme organisers will inform the programmes of the two EHRI Summer Schools in 2014.

EHRI Summer School

Open to scholars from a variety of disciplines (historians, sociologists, psychologists, anthropologists and other academics who are interested in the Holocaust) as well as to archivists, the first EHRI Summer School was organized by the Mémorial de la Shoah. A week later, a second EHRI Summer School, organized by the Institut für Zeitgeschichte, started in Munich.

An EHRI Summer School is a graduate level seminar aimed at deepening the knowledge and comprehension of the extermination process of European Jews during World War II. It also provides a comprehensive overview on the most relevant methodologies and sources as well as an update on the current state of research in the field of Holocaust history. The seminar tackles the history of the Shoah from a European perspective. It is strictly hinged on sources, the latest historiographic interpretations and the most recent research work in the field. Traditional lectures alternate with more intensive document-based work sessions. While all EHRI Summer Schools share the same core curriculum, each has enough time available to cater for special local emphasis and excursions.

EHRI Summer School in Paris, 15 July – 2 August 2013

During the seminar organized by Laura Fontana, the twelve international participants were offered the opportunity to visit major places related to Holocaust in France and to the history of the French Jewish community such as the camp memorial site of Drancy, the Mémorial de la Shoah, the Jewish Museum MAJH (Musée d'art et d'histoire juif), the House of Yiddish Culture (La Maison de la culture Yiddish and the Medem library, the largest Yiddish language library in Europe).

Participants were also offered the opportunity to do their own research work at the Mémorial's library and archives and also to visit the premises of the National Archives (Archives Nationales) and of the Archives of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (Archives des Affaires étrangères).

Lectures and presentations (in English and French), mostly focusing on the Holocaust in Western Europe, were delivered by leading specialized European historians and researchers from different institutions and associations (for topics, see below).

During the Summer School the twelve participants also had the unique opportunity to present and discuss the results of their own research work.

EHRI Summer School in Munich, 22 July to 9 August 2013

The EHRI Summer School in Munich was conducted by the newly founded Center for Holocaust Studies at the Institute of Contemporary History Munich. Twelve international participants took part in the extensive programme.

For the Munich Summer School (led by Johannes Hürter and Andrea Löw, course organization by Giles Bennett), it was possible to secure the Politische Akademie Tutzing as a partner and venue for the first two weeks, while the program of the third week took place together with a group of North American participants of the Summer Academy 'German Sources and Archives of Holocaust History' of the Munich International Summer University (MISU) at Munich's LMU University organized by Wendy Lower. The Center for Holocaust Studies was co-organizer of the Summer Academy. The EHRI Summer School was conducted in English, but passive German skills (for example for reading sources) were expected and sufficiently available among the participants.

The topics of the (usually three hours long) lectures and seminar sessions led by renowned historians concentrated on the period of the events themselves as well as their immediate aftermath and covered questions such as the participation of diverse German functional elites in the Holocaust, the daily life of Jews in the ghettos under German occupation, Jews in Nazi concentration camps, as well as country and regional studies (Ukraine, the Netherlands, France). At all times the active contribution of the participants was expected, whether in the form of contributions to the seminars and work groups, independent archival research in the visited archives, as well as by way of presentation of their own respective research projects (for the topics, see below).

The seminars were supplemented by excursions, for instance to the Concentration Camp Memorial Site in Dachau and the Obersalzberg Documentation. Archival tours were both intended to allow the participants to find sources relevant for their own research projects, but also to provide an overview of the different types of archives and their specificities in use by researchers.
