

EUROPEAN HOLOCAUST RESEARCH INFRASTRUCTURE

EHRI Newsletter - January 2017

European Parliament Commemorates the Holocaust. Continued Research a Necessity for Europe

25/01/2017

Holocaust research is very important. Now more than ever. Facing and comprehending our shared history make people appreciate the importance of the European project. Every day thousands of researchers seek to get the full picture of this dark side of Europe's recent past. These efforts need to be continued.

EHRI Fellowships: Smaller Institutions on Display

26/01/2017

As part of its mission to support the Holocaust research community by building a digital infrastructure and facilitating international human networks, the European Holocaust Research Infrastructure offers different fellowships to researchers and archivists across Europe in different partner institutions. The fellowships are intended to facilitate and encourage exchange of information, knowledge and research regarding the Holocaust as well as to provide our fellows with an interesting and pleasant experience in different institutions. Moreover, the fellowships are specifically aimed at researchers, archivists, curators, and younger scholars, especially PhD candidates with limited resources. The partners that offer a place to EHRI fellows are big institutions like the US Holocaust Memorial

Museum, Bundesarchiv and Yad Vashem, but also some small and medium-sized institutions offer fellowships.

New Partner in EHRI: Kazerne Dossin from Belgium

25/01/2017

EHRI's newest consortium partner Kazerne Dossin is a unique place to remember the Holocaust in Belgium. Over 25,500 Jews, Roma and Sinti were imprisoned here, put onto trains and deported mainly to Auschwitz-Birkenau. Less than 5 percent survived. The museum has been built opposite the barracks to shine a new light on this symbolic place of remembrance. Kazerne Dossin explores one of the darkest pages in Belgium's history, while also examining human rights in their contemporary context.

Digital Historiography of the Holocaust

26/01/2017

Holocaust Research Using Digital Tools

Much of the primary source material on which Holocaust research is based can be found in archives. EHRI not only provides online access to many such archives through its Online Portal, but it also creates (digital) tools and methods that enable researchers and archivists to collaboratively work with these sources.
